Austioned His Produce.

Lafayette Main had a big day Friday auctioning off his produce. He sold quantities of apples, and some watermelons. He did not sell that 9 1-2 foot black snake which he caught sucking milk from one of his cows a couple of weeks ago. He said it was as big around as an ordinary man's arm then, but in spite of having eaten a couple of smaller snakes and a dozen or two frogs since, the reptile is steadily losing weight. Lafayette wore his familiar black sombrers and made his customary imposing appearance.

POWERFUL HORSES UNDER TEST

At North Stonington Fair-Pulling Contests a Feature on Friday-Snappy Light Weight Team Moved More Than Heavyweights-5,680 Pounds-Lafayette Main Conducted an Auction-More Prizes Awarded

Grange Tain was the pulling contests of the horses. Over in the roped enciosure toward the hack of the grounds the horses strained and tugged away at the drag piled high with stone a good part of the afternoon with a big crowd gathered around the lines to see the animals in the most strenuous sort of action. It was six o'clock before the competition in the inst of the three classes was declared to be closed and by that time the grounds were greatly well deserted after a fair that has put money in the grangers' pockets and smiles on their faces, even though it meant plenty of hard word for most of them. It shows unmistakably that North Stonington grange is one of the busiest and liveliest in the state.

The judges were Eugene Wilcox of Kingston, Enos M. Gray of Ledyard and Alexander Langworthy of Westerly and James F. Brown of North Stonington was the capable clerk and kept the records of the weights and performances.

For Horses Over 8000.

Joseph Gerard of Canonset, I. and Antoino Vito, of the Vito Construction company, which has been ding road work at Stonington, were the two entrants in the class that called for weights of 3,000 or better. Both pairs got away with as much as two tons and a helf on the drag, but when more weight was piled on Mr. Gerard's animals proved their superior powers by a narrow margin. The final weight was 5610 pounds.

In Middleweight Class. In the class of draft horses over 2,700 and under $,500 pounds the Vito Construction company had a winning team, with Louis Dotelo's bays from Westerly second by a narrow margin.
The final weight in this event was

The entrants in the final class, under 3709, were P. L. Pierce, Louis Dotolo, George Champlin, all of Westerly. A. W. Perry of Stonington, and Eimer E. Miller of Jewett City. One of Mr. Prioris horses appeared in a brand new harness but on the second start, at 4800 pounds, the harness strap broke and the harness was stripped clean off the animal. The chair was light and it also bothered by breaking half a dozen times at crudial moments. There was a keen fight for the honors here, however, and as more and more weight was added, it became evident that the lighter horses were going to upt pull even the heavier classes that had preced them. The Dotolo team was drawn first and then Mr. Perry retired, leaving the field narrowed to three teams. The supply of rocks was exhausted before the load got too heavy for the winning team to budge it and slide up the stipulated three feet, and human freight was added. Finally at 5880 Elmer Miller's Jewett City horses showed a margin over the other pairs, Mr. Champlin being second and Pete Prion thifd.

The band played busily most of the afternoon and everyone seemed to be having a jolly time. People had time to look at the exhibits over again and among the particularly fine ones that continued to draw admiration was of Mrs. George D. Coats, showing articles made from milk. She had a case all to herself and in it were milk and buttermilk, skim milk and cream, cheese of a number of kinds, custard, cream cake, and cream ple, and a whole lot of other products of the dairy. It was an ambitions display and a tempting one, and Mrs. Coats received many compliments to which she replied that she could have made many more things that she didn't show. Mrs. C. E. Hewitt's collection of 26 varieties of sweet old garden, flowers also were duly admired, and George L. Champlin's dahlia display was a beautiful array of color.

Secretary E. Frank White was one of the hardest working men on the grounds all three days, which is saying much, for every one of the grangers was strenuously disposed. Smart Suits for Fall Wear NOW ON VIEW

Daily arrivals now in our Garment Section are bringing newer styles to Norwich women, and a good sign of advancing prosperity is the interest with which the smart garments are viewed.

The military note is still sounding although in a modified way and suits of unquestionable trimness and smartness are following these lines. Coats as a rule are longer than last season, in some cases even approaching the length of the redingote.

You are invited to inspect the advance guard of a season's styles at any time. The showing is informal as the selection is not large as yet, but styles, colorings and weaves are typical of the newest and best.
